opposed his grand idea—a few months ago considered a chimera—today a staggering reality and a monument to the brains of the man who helped him in the success of this great scheme. The new city La Plata eclipses everything we have read of the founding of cities since the days of Rome and Athens.

Bankers, merchants, dealers and others are now becoming aware of the immense importance of La Plata and the importance of the port and agencies, and branches have become a primordial necessity.

The trade of the Plata is assuming large proportions every month, and there is no better barometer of the great expansion of affairs than the monthly figures of the Custom House. Our exports are doing out in such considerable volume that the fact is attracting general notice; there remains much to be shipped yet. Already we have shipped 20,000 bales of wool over last year's figures, and in the past fortnight of this month over five thousand tons of cereals were embarked and every steamer leaves port with full cargo. But great as is the growth in Buenos Aires and Rosario it gives but a faint conception of the velocity with which we are whirling in our orbit; the growth of the country is not only palpable in the great focus of this province; in the remotest of the nation, in the far South, the far West and the at the same pace, and the growth of ment here, can never be carried out.

The very great efforts during the last fortnight were felt with unusual severity in the harbour of Montevideo, and we regret to report the wreck of the Eleonora with a cargo of timber and kerosene. The gale was unusually severe, and fell all along the coast, and in the middle of the day the fortunate Sub-Lieutenant Rivas, whose loss they had heard of a few days before, in the following way:—

A detachment of eight soldiers of the Line and an Indian guide 70 years old under Lieutenant Orellana, had followed the tracks of the Expedition, in search of young Rivas, but want of water (they had been two days and a half without any) forced them to return to Port Belgrano, and they struck on the tracks of the expedition, joined by the Indian guide, and they found the body of the young Rivas, who had been killed by the Indians. The body was found in a very good state, and the Indians were very kind to the expedition, and they gave them some food and water. The expedition was very much surprised to find the body of the young Rivas, and they were very much surprised to
